RYAN-In this The supreme cent of errors of Con-necticut has handed down a decision for the plaintiff in the came of Aiya J. Dixon of the town of Sterling vs. Byron M. Lewis, et al. Mr. Lewis to an East Kill-of the town of Sterling vs. Byron M.

Lewis, et al. Mr. Lewis is an East Killingiv man.

This case, of no great importance so far as the money involved was concerned, came up from a justice's court in Sterling to the superior court for Windham county and was heard at Putnam. The supreme court reverses the decision of the superior court, where Judge Kellogg presided, and decides that there was error in the judgment. A new trial has been ordered.

The draft of the plaintiff's finding as prepared by Attorney Harry E. Back of Danielson sets forth that from May 1. 1917, to October 20, 1917, Mr. Dixon occupied a farm in Sterling and that from about October 3, 1917, Mr. Lewis leased and occupied a pasture on the same road as was the plaintiff's farm. There were no hars maintained on Dixon's farm along the highway. Lewis used his pasture for keeping 24 heifers and a bull. About July 5, 1917, Lewis sold the heifers to Harold Copeland, formerly of Brocklyn, but retained ownership of the bull. Mr. Lewis agreed to pasture and look after Copeland's cattle.

The latter part of May some of Lewis' cattle were at large in the highways and so the Dixon farm and without a keeper. About July 81 five of the defendant's cattle were at large about two miles from the pasture and injured, the garden of Mrs. Lillian Nason. Mrs. Nason confined the cattle back to pasture. During the menths of July and August the cattle were seen at large 24 or more times. The astite trespassed upon Dixon's farm for hours at a time. After a time Dixon locked some of the cattle in his barn. Dyring the night of September 12 the hinges upon the harn dnor at Dixon's farm were pulled off and three head of cattle taken out and placed in Lewis' pasture.

Difficulties fellowed. Dixon alleging that Lewis did not take proper precaution to restrain his cattle. Action in the courts came next, with the result indicated.
